execution (in priority order):

1. The price of the financial instrument and the costs associated to execution in relation to providing best execution were considered to be the most important factor.
2. Size of order and overall liquidity of instrument traded.
3. Speed at which FSL were able to execute order from client, maintaining a price representative of current market conditions at time order was given.
4. Likelihood of execution and settlement.

FSL frequently monitor and review trades to ensure best execution thresholds were maintained and FSL does not have any close links, nor receive any rebates from venues used to execute orders.
